EXPLANATION OF WHY THIS CASE IS A CASE OF PUBLIC OR GREAT INTEREST AND WHY LEAVE TO APPEAL SHOULD BE GRANTED

This Court will certify cases meeting one of two conditions; a substantial constitutional question, or a case of public or great general interest. Noble v. Colwell (1989), 44 Ohio St.3d 92, 94, 540 N.E.2d 1381.

This case presents a substantial constitutional question. The question presented by this case is whether the amendment of an indictment, which increases the penalty of the offense, changes the name and identity of the crime. Crim.R. 7(D) permits amendments that retain the name and identity of the crime as originally indicted. The Fourth District Court of Appeals decision has expanded the application of Crim.R. 7(D) to prohibit amendments that do not change the name or identity of the offense but that change the level of offense. As the Appellee and the Court of Appeals has noted, a Defendant's constitutional right to have his charges presented to the Grand Jury is clearly applicable to the resolution of this issue.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTS

On April 11, 2005, Appellee and several other Defendants were indicted in a multi-count Indictment. Appellee was specifically indicted and charged with Count One, Engaging in a Pattern of Corrupt Activity, in violation of O.R.C. §2923.32(A)(1), a felony of the first degree; Count Fifteen, Aggravated Trafficking in Drugs, in violation of O.R.C. §2925.03(A)(1), a felony of the fourth degree; Count Eighteen, Aggravated Trafficking in Drugs, in violation of O.R.C. §2925.03(A)(1), a felony of the fourth degree; Count Twenty-Three, Receiving Stolen Property, in violation of O.R.C. §2913.51, a felony of the fourth degree; and Count Thirty-Three, Deception to Obtain Dangerous Drug, in violation of O.R.C. §2925.22, a felony of the fifth degree.

On April 11, 2006, Appellant filed a motion to amend count fifteen from a felony of the fourth degree to a felony of the second degree. Without objection from Appellee's trial counsel, the Court granted Appellant's motion to amend the Indictment. Appellee was subsequently convicted on Count Fifteen, Aggravated Trafficking in Drugs and sentenced to a mandatory two years of incarceration. Appellee was also convicted on Count Thirty-Three, Deception to Obtain Dangerous Drug and sentenced to one year of incarceration. The sentences were ordered to run concurrently. Appellee was found not guilty on the remaining counts. On May 5, 2006, Appellee filed a motion for acquittal which was denied by the trial court.

Appellee filed his notice of appeal to the Fourth District Court of Appeals on June 28, 2006. By decision dated April 27, 2007, the Fourth District Court of Appeals reversed the trial court's decision on amending Count Fifteen and remanded the case back to the trial court. On May 2, 2007, Appellant filed a Motion to Certify the Conflict which was denied by the Court of Appeals by entry dated May 17, 2007. Appellant is now presenting this appeal to this Court.

The entire factual scenario, involving numerous other defendants and numerous other charges, is too complicated to recite herein. To summarize, as a result of an undercover drug investigation, involving Charlie Davis Motor Sales, Inc., Charles "Bobby" Davis; Appellee; and other numerous other defendants, the Highland County Grand Jury returned a multi-count Indictment alleging Engaging in a Pattern of Corrupt Activity with the underlying crimes of ~~Aggravated Trafficking in Drugs, Trafficking in Drugs, Possession of Drugs, Aggravated Possession of Drugs and Receiving Stolen Property.~~ The basic facts relative to Appellee's case concern the charges of Aggravated Trafficking in Drugs (Oxycontin), in which on or about February 21, 2005 and February 26, 2005, Appellee sold or offer to sell Oxycontin and the charge of Deception to Obtain Dangerous Drug (Percocet), that on or about January 1, 200 through February 26, 2005, Appellee did, by deception, procure the administration of a prescription for, or the dispensing of Oxycodone (Percocet).

ARGUMENT IN SUPPORT OF PROPOSITION OF LAW

PROPOSITION OF LAW: CRIM.R. 7(D) PERMITS THE AMENDMENT OF AN INDICTMENT CHANGING THE LEVEL OF OFFENSE BECAUSE THAT AMENDMENT DOES NOT CHANGE THE NAME OR IDENTITY OF THE CRIME CHARGED.

Crim.R. 7(D) provides for the amendment of an indictment.

The court may at any time before, during, or after a trial amend the indictment, information, complaint, or bill of particulars, in respect to any defect, imperfection, or omission in form or substance, or of any variance with the evidence, provided no change is made in the name or identity of the crime charged. If any amendment is made to the substance of the indictment, information, or complaint, or to cure a variance between the indictment, information, or complaint and the proof, the defendant is entitled to a discharge of the jury on the defendant's motion, if a jury has been impanelled, and to a reasonable continuance, unless it clearly appears from the whole proceedings that the defendant has not been misled or prejudiced by the defect or variance in respect to which the amendment is made, or that the defendant's rights will be fully protected by proceeding with the trial, or by a postponement thereof to a later day with the same or another jury.....

In its decision in this matter, the Fourth District Court of Appeals has interpreted this language to mean that the name and identity of the crime charged is changed when an amendment changes the level of the charge. There is no authority for that proposition.

This Court has reviewed amendments to indictments in three significant cases. In State v. Headley (1983), 6 Ohio St.3d 475, 453 N.E.2d 716, this Court reviewed a case in which the trial court permitted the amendment of the indictment to include the specific substance omitted from the indictment charging trafficking in drugs, a violation of O.R.C. §2925.03. In the syllabus, this Court held that the type of controlled substance involved in an aggravated trafficking case is an essential element of the crime and must be included in the indictment and cannot be added by amendment. The Court's analysis was that the trafficking statute contains more than one criminal offense thereby requiring the type of controlled substance as an essential element of the crime, i.e., trafficking in cocaine; trafficking in heroin; trafficking in marijuana. Arguably then, the name and identity of the crime changes with the type of controlled substance involved.

The Headley analysis is consistent with Appellant's position. This Court focused on the amendment as an essential element of the crime. "Where one of the vital elements identifying the crime is omitted from the indictment, it is defective and cannot be cured by the court as such a procedure would permit the court to convict the accused on a charge different from that found by the grand jury." Headley, 6 Ohio St.3d at 478-479. The weight of the drug, therefore, is not an essential element in a trafficking charge.

A couple of years later, this Court decided State v. O'Brien (1987), 30 Ohio St.3d 122, 508 N.E.2d 144. In O'Brien, this Court reviewed an amendment to an endangering children indictment in which the mental element was added later by amendment approved by the trial court. O'Brien modified Headley on the issue of the amendment of an essential element of the crime. "An indictment, which does not contain all the essential elements of an offense, may be amended to include the omitted element, if the name or the identity of the crime is not changed, and the accused has not been misled or prejudiced by the omission of such element from the indictment." O'Brien, 30 Ohio St.3d at syllabus. O'Brien also established a two part review for amendments to indictments. "The rule [Crim.R. 7(D)] clearly permits errors of omission to be corrected during the course of or even after the trial, as long as such amendment makes no change in the name or identity of the crime charged. Crim.R. 7(D). Accordingly, provided that appellant's amendment herein changed neither the name or identity of the crime charged, such amendment will have passed the first stage of our Crim.R. 7(D) analysis." O'Brien, 30 Ohio St.3d at 125-126 (emphasis in original). This Court focused in O'Brien on the actual charge as opposed to the elements of the charge and concluded that adding the mental element to the charge did not change the name or identity of the crime charged.

This Court then considered whether the amendment was a change in the substance of the indictment. “We believe the addition of an essential element to an indictment necessarily amends the substance of the indictment.” Id., 30 Ohio St.3d at 147-148. This Court looked at the notice to the defendant as it related to the name and identity of the crime as indicted. “Even had appellee done so, we find that it would have been proper for the trial court to overrule the motion as the appellee would have been unable to show that he had been misled or prejudiced by the permitted amendment. Appellee had notice of both the offense and the applicable statute.” Id., 30 Ohio St.3d at 148.

Applying the O’Brien two part test to this case again demonstrates that the amendment was proper. First, the Appellee was charged with trafficking in oxycontin. That charge never change pre or post amendment. Second, Appellee was clearly advised of both the offense and the statute at issue. Appellee knew that he was defending a trafficking in oxycontin charge.

In 2000, this Court decided State v. Childs (2000), 88 Ohio St.3d 558, 728 N.E.2d 379, 2000 Ohio 425. In Childs, this Court reviewed an indictment in which the type of drug was omitted from an aggravated trafficking conspiracy charge. Again, this Court focused on the sufficiency of the notice to defendant by the indictment. “An indictment meets constitutional requirements if it ‘first, contains the elements of the offense charged and fairly informs a defendant of the charge against which he must defend, and, second, enables him to plead an acquittal or conviction in bar of future prosecutions for the same offense.’” Childs, 88 Ohio St.3d at 565. This Court specifically discussed the sentencing information contained in the indictment.

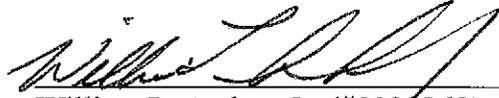

“Courts have consistently held that certain information need not be specifically set forth in the indictment in order to be sufficiently provided to defendants: ‘[A] valid indictment need not notify the defendant of the sentencing possibilities to which he is exposed except in a general way.’” Id., 88 Ohio St.3d at 566 (citing, Commonwealth v. Cantres (1989), 405 Mass. 238, 241, 540 N.E.2d 149, 151). In this case, because the name and identity of the crime charged did not change, Appellee was apprised of the statutory crime and the statutory range of punishment for that crime.

Appellant acknowledges that this Court discussed the level of the offense in each of the decisions cited above. None of the cases involved the amendment of an indictment in which a higher penalty was possible. Any discussion of an increased penalty as a result of an amendment is purely dicta. There is simply no statutory or Supreme Court precedent addressing this issue. The cases cited above focused on the name and identity of the crime as related to elements of the offense and notice to the defendant. There is no legal authority for the proposition that amending an indictment to set forth a harsher penalty is changing the name and identity of the crime.

CONCLUSION

Crim.R. 7(D) sets forth the parameters for the amendment of an indictment. As this Court has interpreted the rule, as long as the name and identity of the crime charged is not changed and the defendant is on notice of the charge, an amendment that increases the penalty comports with the requirements of Crim.R. 7(D). Therefore, the decision of the Fourth District Court of Appeals should be reversed.

COURT OF APPEALS
HIGHLAND COUNTY, OHIO

APR 27 2007

STATE OF OHIO,
Plaintiff-Appellee,

vs.

MICHAEL DAVIS,
Defendant-Appellant.

Case No. 06CA26

Ashlette Donley
HIGHLAND COUNTY CLERK OF COURTS

DECISION AND JUDGMENT ENTRY

APPEARANCES:

Michael P. Kelly, Mt. Orab, Ohio, for Appellant.

James B. Grandey and Shari L. Harrell, Hillsboro, Ohio, for Appellee.

Harsha, J.

{¶1} Michael Davis appeals his conviction for second-degree aggravated trafficking in drugs. He asserts that the trial court erred by permitting the state to amend the original indictment from a fourth-degree felony to a second-degree felony as the amendment changed the identity of the offense. We agree. The amendment's increase in the degree of the offense changed its identity in violation of Crim.R. 7(D) because it resulted in Davis not having prior notice of the charge and it violated his right to presentment of the charges to the grand jury. Furthermore, although Davis's trial counsel did not object to the amendment, we have previously recognized Crim.R. 7(D) violations as plain error and do so here, as well.

{¶12} Our disposition of Davis's first assignment of error renders his remaining two assignments of error moot, and we need not address them. See App.R. 12(A)(1)(c). Therefore, we reverse Davis's conviction.

I. FACTS

{¶13} The Highland County grand jury returned a thirty-three count indictment that named eleven defendants, including Davis. The indictment charged Davis with: (1) engaging in a pattern of corrupt activity, in violation of R.C. 2923.32(A)(1); (2) two counts of aggravated trafficking in drugs, in violation of R.C. 2925.03(A)(1), both fourth-degree felonies; (3) two counts of receiving stolen property, in violation of R.C. 2913.51; (4) deception to obtain a dangerous drug, in violation of R.C. 2925.22; and (5) possession of drugs, in violation of R.C. 2925.11.

{¶14} Count Fifteen, one of the aggravated trafficking offenses, charged:

"On or about February 21, 2005 and February 26, 2005, and in Highland County, Ohio and as part of a course of criminal conduct in Fayette, Ross and other counties, Charles R. Davis, Michael A. Davis and Charles Davis Motor Sales, Inc. did knowingly sell or offer to sell Oxycontin, a schedule II controlled substance in an amount less than the bulk amount, to wit: approximately 7.2 grams, in violation of R.C. 2925.03(A)(1) * * *."

{¶15} The court subsequently granted the state's motion to amend count fifteen of the indictment to read:

"On or about February 21, 2005 and February 26, 2006, [sic] and in Highland County, Ohio and as part of a course of criminal conduct, Michael A. Davis and Charles R. Davis and Charles Davis Motor Sales, Inc. did knowingly sell or offer to sell Oxycontin, a schedule II controlled substance in an amount greater than five times the bulk amount but less than fifty times the bulk amount, in violation of R.C. 2925.03(A)(1) * * *."

{16} The jury found Davis guilty of the amended charge of aggravated trafficking in drugs (count fifteen) and of deception to obtain a dangerous drug. It found him not guilty of the remaining charges.

{17} After the jury returned its verdict, Davis filed a motion for acquittal under Crim.R. 29(C). The trial court overruled his motion and sentenced him to a two-year concurrent term of imprisonment for the aggravated trafficking and the deception to obtain a dangerous drug offenses.

II. ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR

{18} In his appeal, Davis raises the following assignments of error.

First Assignment of Error:

The trial court erred when it permitted the amendment of Count Fifteen, aggravated trafficking in drugs which elevated the offense from a felony of the fourth degree to a felony of the second degree.

Second Assignment of Error: The trial court erred in overruling defendant-appellant's motion to set aside the jury verdict.

Third Assignment of Error: Appellant was denied effective assistance of counsel under Article I, Sections 10 and 16 of the Ohio Constitution and the Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

III. AMENDMENT OF INDICTMENT

{19} We find Davis's first assignment of error dispositive of his appeal. There, Davis argues that the trial court erred by permitting the state to amend count fifteen of the indictment. He asserts that amending the indictment from a fourth-degree felony aggravated trafficking offense to a second-degree felony aggravated trafficking offense violated his Fifth Amendment right to be indicted by a grand jury.

A. PLAIN ERROR

{¶10} Because Davis failed to object to the amendment of the indictment, he has waived all but plain error. See Crim.R. 52(B) (stating that plain errors or defects affecting substantial rights may be noticed although they were not brought to the attention of the court"). The Ohio Supreme Court has cautioned that we are to take notice of plain error under Crim.R. 52(B) "with the utmost caution, under exceptional circumstances, and only to prevent a manifest miscarriage of justice." State v. Long (1978), 53 Ohio St.2d 91, 372 N.E.2d 804, paragraph three of the syllabus. The plain error doctrine permits correction of judicial proceedings only when error is clearly apparent on the face of the record and is prejudicial to the appellant. See, e.g., State v. Barnes (2002), 94 Ohio St.3d 21, 27, 759 N.E.2d 1240.

{¶11} We have previously recognized an amendment to an indictment that violates Crim.R. 7(D) as plain error. See State v. Atkins (July 14, 1997), Washington App. No. 96CA34.

B. GENERAL PRINCIPLES GOVERNING AMENDMENTS OF INDICTMENTS

{¶12} Although Davis frames this as a Fifth Amendment issue under the United States Constitution, the United States Supreme Court has not found that amendment applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment. See Ring v. Arizona (2002), 536 U.S. 584, 597, fn.4, 122 S.Ct. 2428, 153 L.Ed.2d 556 (stating that the Fourteenth Amendment "has not been construed to include the Fifth Amendment right to "presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury""), quoting Apprendi v. New Jersey (2000), 530 U.S. 466, 477, fn.3, 120 S.Ct. 2348, 147

L.Ed.2d 435. Therefore, we construe his argument as being brought under Section 10, Article I of the Ohio Constitution.

{¶13} Section 10, Article I of the Ohio Constitution states: “[N]o person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on presentment or indictment of a grand jury.” This constitutional provision “guarantees the accused that the essential facts constituting the offense for which he is tried will be found in the indictment of the grand jury. Where one of the vital elements identifying the crime is omitted from the indictment, it is defective and cannot be cured by the court as such a procedure would permit the court to convict the accused on a charge essentially different from that found by the grand jury.” State v. Headley (1983), 6 Ohio St.3d 475, 478-79, 453 N.E.2d 716. This rule ensures that a criminal defendant will not be “surprised” by a charge. See In re Reed, 147 Ohio App.3d 182, 2002-Ohio-43, 769 N.E.2d 412, at ¶33.

{¶14} By specifying when a court may permit an amendment to an indictment, Crim.R. 7(D) supplements the constitutional right to presentment and indictment by a grand jury, see id., and State v. Strozier (Oct. 5, 1994), Montgomery App. No. 14021,. The rule states:

The court may at any time before, during, or after a trial amend the indictment, information, complaint, or bill of particulars, in respect to any defect, imperfection, or omission in form or substance, or of any variance with the evidence, provided no change is made in the name or identity of the crime charged. If any amendment is made to the substance of the indictment, information, or complaint, or to cure a variance between the indictment, information, or complaint and the proof, the defendant is entitled to a discharge of the jury on the defendant's motion, if a jury has been impanelled, and to a reasonable continuance, unless it clearly appears from the whole proceedings that the defendant has not been misled or prejudiced by the defect or variance in respect to which the amendment is made, or that the defendant's rights will be fully protected by proceeding with the trial, or by a postponement thereof to a later day with the same or another jury. Where a jury is discharged under this division, jeopardy shall not attach to the offense charged in the amended indictment, information, or complaint. No action of the court in refusing a continuance or postponement under this division is reviewable except after motion to grant a new trial therefore is refused by the trial court, and no appeal based upon such action of the court shall be sustained nor reversal had unless, from consideration of the whole proceedings, the reviewing court finds that a failure of justice resulted.

{¶15} Thus, the rule permits most amendments but flatly prohibits amendments that change the name or identity of the crime charged. See State v. Kittle, Athens 04CA41, 2005-Ohio-3198, at ¶12, citing State v. O'Brien (1987), 30 Ohio St.3d 122, 126, 508 N.E.2d 144, which approved an amendment that added an essential element to the charge. But, a trial court commits reversible error when it permits any amendment that changes the name or identity of the offense charged. Kittle; State v. Smith, Franklin App. No. 03AP1157, 2004-Ohio-4786, at ¶10; see also, State v. Headley (1983), 6 Ohio St.3d 475, 478-479, 453 N.E.2d 716. "Whether an amendment changes the name or identity of the crime charged is a matter of law." Kittle; see, also, State v. Cooper (June 25, 1998), Ross App. No. 97CA2326, citing State v. Jackson (1992), 78 Ohio App.3d 479, 605 N.E.2d 426. Hence, we review this question de novo. Kittle.

{¶16} Here, the name of the offense remained the same: aggravated trafficking in drugs. The question we must resolve is whether elevating the degree of the offense from a fourth-degree felony to a second-degree felony changed the identity of the offense. As one court has noted, "[t]he issue is not free from difficulty." State v. Smith, Clark App. No. 2001-CA-98, 2002-Ohio-4118, at ¶9; see, also, Katz and Gianelli, Ohio Criminal Law (2007), Section 40:7 ("What constitutes a change in the name or identity of the crime charged has been the subject of some controversy."). Our research confirms these assessments.

C. INCREASE IN DEGREE OR SEVERITY

{¶17} The Supreme Court of Ohio has indicated an amendment that changes neither the degree nor the severity of an offense does not change the identity of the offense. See State v. O'Brien (1987), 30 Ohio St.3d 122, 126-127, 508 N.E.2d 144, which concluded that amending indictment to include the essential mens rea element of "recklessness" did not change the identity of the offense. The court held "the identity of this crime was not changed by the addition * * * to the indictment. Neither the penalty nor the degree of the offense was changed as a result of the amendment." See, generally, State v. Martin, Brown App. No. CA2003-09-011, 2004-Ohio-4309, at ¶24; State v. Smith, Franklin App. No. 03AP-1157, 2004-Ohio-4786, at ¶11; State v. Daughenbaugh, Seneca App. No. 13-04-11, 2004-Ohio-4528, at 9; State v. Hickman, Summit App. No. 20883, 2002-Ohio-3406, at ¶43; State v. Waites (Dec. 20, 1996), Lake App. No. 93-L-009; State v. Finn (Apr. 29, 1994), Montgomery App. No. 14096; State v. Head (Nov. 21, 1991), Cuyahoga App. No. 59367 (all noting that the amendment did not increase the degree of the offense).

{¶18} While the court in O'Brien stated its conclusion in the negative, we believe it can fairly be construed to mean an amendment that increases the degree of the offense does run afoul of Crim.R. 7(D). This conclusion is bolstered by State v. Headley (1983), 6 Ohio St.3d 475, 453 N.E.2d 716. There, the court held that amending a trafficking in drugs indictment to describe the controlled substance involved changed the name and identity of the offense by increasing the severity of the offense from "trafficking in drugs" to "aggravated trafficking in drugs." The court thus held that Crim.R. 7(D) prohibited the amendment. In its analysis the court stated:

"In this case, [the defendant] was charged under R.C. 2925.03, relating to trafficking in drugs. Generally, that statute prohibits the selling, distribution, production or possession of certain controlled substances, or drugs, for certain purposes. The severity of the offense is dependent upon the type of drug involved. Under R.C. 2925.03(C), the offense is aggravated trafficking if the substance involved is a Schedule I drug, with the exception of marijuana, or a Schedule II drug. Under R.C. 2925.03(D), if the substance involved is a Schedule III, IV or V drug, the offense is the lesser one of trafficking in drugs.

Under this analysis, it is evident that R.C. 2925.03 sets forth more than one criminal offense with the identity of each being determined by the type of controlled substance involved. As such, the type of controlled substance involved constitutes an essential element of the crime which must be included in the indictment. The omission of that information cannot be cured by amendment, as to do so would change the very identity of the offense charged." (Emphasis supplied)

Id. at 479.

{¶19} However, in a case somewhat analogous to ours, one appellate court determined that amending the indictment to change the amount of drugs involved did not change the identity of the offense. See State v. Durr (July 28, 2000), Sandusky S-97-056, where the original indictment charged:

"On or about December 13, 1996, in the vicinity of North Front and Milton Streets, Fremont, Sandusky County, Ohio, the defendant did knowingly obtain, possess or use a controlled substance, to wit: 5.2 grams of Crack Cocaine, a Schedule II drug.”

The indictment further alleged that the offense was in violation of R.C. 2925.11 and that it was a third degree felony because the amount alleged was more than five and less than ten grams. The evidence at trial prompted the state to amend the indictment to allege that an additional two grams of crack cocaine were involved. The appellate court concluded that the amendment did not change the name or identity of the crime charged because the defendant still was charged “with possession of more than five and less than ten grams of crack cocaine and still charged appellant with a third degree felony.” Thus, the amendment did not change the degree of the offense.

{¶20} Here, the state changed the indictment to charge a greater amount of drugs was involved, which consequently elevated the degree of the offense from a fourth-degree felony to a second-degree felony. Generally, a violation of R.C. 2925.03(A)(1) involving a schedule II drug, i.e., aggravated drug trafficking, is a fourth-degree felony. See R.C. 2925.03(C)(1)(a). However, R.C. 2925.03(C)(1)(d) states that aggravated drug trafficking is a second-degree felony if the amount involved equals or exceeds five times the “bulk amount” but is less than fifty times the “bulk amount.” The original indictment charged only a fourth degree felony and stated the amount involved was 7.2 grams. The caption of the indictment stated that the offense was a fourth-degree felony. The indictment did not specify the amount in terms of “bulk amount.” The amendment ultimately changed the offense from a fourth-degree felony to a second-degree felony. This increase in the severity of the offense changes the identity of the offense because of the lack of notice to the accused and the violation of his right of presentment of the charges to the grand jury. Headley, supra, O'Brien, supra. Thus, Crim.R. 7(D) flatly prohibits the amendment and the trial court erred by permitting the state to do so.

{¶21} The state nevertheless asserts that under State v. Smith (1983), 14 Ohio App.3d 366, 471 N.E.2d 795, the amendment did not change the name or identity of the offense. In that case, the court held that an amendment to an R.C. 2925.03 complicity indictment to include the amount of drugs involved did not change the name or identity of the crime. The original indictment read: “[The defendant] did knowingly aid or abet David Dillon in committing a violation of [R.C. 2925.03], to wit: Trafficking in Marijuana * * *.” The trial court subsequently allowed the state to amend the indictment to state the amount of drugs involved.

{¶22} The appellate court framed the issue as whether in a complicity indictment the addition of the amount sold or offered to be sold by the principal constitutes a change in the name or identity of the crime charged. Id. at 368. The court concluded Headley was not controlling because it involved the type of drug, whereas the Smith indictment involved the amount of a previously specified drug. The court stated that “the degree of the offense or severity of the penalty does not necessarily control the question of a change in the name or identity of the crime or whether a material element has been omitted.” Id. at 369.

{¶23} We choose not to follow Smith as it pre-dates subsequent Ohio Supreme Court and intermediate appellate court cases interpreting Headley, and in our opinion, it runs counter to those subsequent cases. As O'Brien (decided after Smith) implied, a change in the identity of the offense occurs when the amendment increases the degree or severity of the offense charged.

E. CONCLUSION

{¶24} Under Crim.7(D), the trial court can approve most amendments to an indictment. It can even approve the addition of some elements that have been overlooked. But, it cannot permit any amendment that results in a change in the name or identity of the charge. Thus, where the indictment omits the mens rea element of a crime, the court can correct the omission by amendment if the name and the identity of the crime do not change. O'Brien, supra. But the State cannot switch the identity of a crime via an amendment. Headley, supra. And when it changes the degree of the offense from a fourth-degree felony to a second-degree felony, the amendment effectively changes the identity of the crime in violation of Crim.R. 7(D). O'Brien, supra. It also runs afoul of constitutional protections requiring notice to the accused and the accused's right to presentment to the grand jury.

{¶25} Because Crim.R. 7(D) flatly forbids amendments changing the identity of a charge, the amendment was unlawful. Thus, the trial court erred by permitting the state to amend the indictment. Because of its constitutional nature, the error is one that merits applying the plain error doctrine. Additionally, given the flat prohibition in Crim.R. 7(D) against amendments changing the identity of charges, Davis need not demonstrate that he suffered any prejudice as a result of the forbidden amendment. See Kittle, supra; Middletown v.

Blevins (1987), 35 Ohio App.3d 65, 67, 519 N.E.2d 846; see, also, State v.

Gilleland, Champaign App. No. 2004CA1, 2005-Ohio-659, at ¶15.

{¶26} Accordingly, we reverse the trial court's judgment and remand for further proceedings.

JUDGMENT REVERSED AND CAUSE REMANDED.

JUDGMENT ENTRY

It is ordered that the JUDGMENT BE REVERSED AND CAUSE REMANDED and that the Appellant recover of Appellee costs herein taxed.

The Court finds there were reasonable grounds for this appeal.

It is ordered that a special mandate issue out of this Court directing the Highland County Common Pleas Court to carry this judgment into execution.

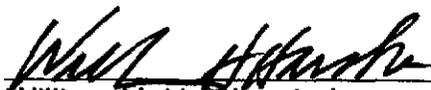

IF A STAY OF EXECUTION OF SENTENCE AND RELEASE UPON BAIL HAS BEEN PREVIOUSLY GRANTED BY THE TRIAL COURT OR THIS COURT, it is temporarily continued for a period not to exceed sixty days upon the bail previously posted. The purpose of a continued stay is to allow Appellant to file with the Ohio Supreme Court an application for a stay during the pendency of proceedings in that court. If a stay is continued by this entry, it will terminate at the earlier of the expiration of the sixty day period, or the failure of the Appellant to file a notice of appeal with the Ohio Supreme Court in the forty-five day appeal period pursuant to Rule II, Sec. 2 of the Rules of Practice of the Ohio Supreme Court. Additionally, if the Ohio Supreme Court dismisses the appeal prior to expiration of sixty days, the stay will terminate as of the date of such dismissal.

A certified copy of this entry shall constitute the mandate pursuant to Rule 27 of the Rules of Appellate Procedure. Exceptions.

McFarland, P.J.: Concur in Judgment and Opinion.

Kline, J.: Concur in Judgment and Opinion as to Assignments of Error I & III; Dissents as to Assignment of Error II.
